

Farima Karimi

Farima Karimi is a Swedish-Iranian screenwriter and producer based in Stockholm.

Karimi holds a master's degree in film production from the renowned Stockholm Academy of Dramatic Arts, and has during her career as a producer worked with documentaries as well as fiction. Her films include the acclaimed short Skolstartssorg (2017), the documentaries Prison Sisters (2016) and Those Who Said No (2014), and most recently the anthology One-Off Incident/Force of Habit (2019), which she co-produced with Finnish Tuffi Films.

While working as a producer, Karimi pursued her passion for screenwriting. In 2019, she graduated from the esteemed Alma Löv Script Academy and is currently working on several projects for both film and TV, including her own feature film. She is episode writer of Viaplay's coming drama comedy Halva halva.

Karimi was selected for the 2020 networking forum Nordic Film Lab, an exclusive program for up and coming Scandinavian filmmakers, focusing on the artistic processes in filmmaking.

As a producer, Karimi's latest project is the feature thriller Dogborn, which she produced together with Momento Film, and entered with in the talent program STHLM Debut.
