

Karin Arrhenius

Karin Arrhenius is a highly acclaimed Swedish screenwriter known for her original screenplays The Girl (2009) and Sanctuary (2013), both directed by Fredrik Edfeldt. The Girl has won awards both domestically and internationally, receiving the 'Best Debut Film' (Honorable Mention) and 'Best Feature Film' (Deutsches Kinderhilfswerk) at the 2009 Berlin Film Festival. The Girl received four nominations at the Guldbagge Awards in 2010, including 'Best Script'.

Arrhenius' screenplays also include In Your Veins (2009), starring Joel Kinnaman and One Eye Red (2007), based on the best-selling book by Jonas Hassen Khemiri.

Besides her early studies in Literature and the History of Ideas at Stockholm University and Lund University, Arrhenius studied screenwriting at the prestigious Stockholm Academy of Dramatic Arts from 2001 to 2004 and at Biskops Arnö in 1999.

January 2023 saw the premiere of the highly praised Blackwater, for which Arrhenius is head-writer together with Maren Louise Käehne. The six-part crime drama is based on Kerstin Ekman's classic novel of the same name.

Arrhenius is also the screenwriter behind the much awaited There's Nothing to Be Afraid of which will be directed by renowned Swedish filmmaker Johan Renck. The TV Mini-Series There's Nothing to Be Afraid of, which is based on Johan Heltne's novel of the same name, will begin production shortly. Furthermore, Arrhenius is head-writer, alongside Oskar Söderlund, for the second season of the hit series Rebecka Martinsson (2019).
